Boxing is a powerful and effective martial art that can be used for self-defense in a street fight. However, it is important to remember that street fights are not the same as boxing matches. In a street fight, there are no rules and anything goes. This means that you need to be prepared to use whatever techniques you can to get the upper hand and defend yourself.

In this article, we will discuss 11 boxing tricks that you can use in a street fight. These tricks are not meant to replace formal boxing training, but they can give you a significant advantage in a real-world altercation.

1. Use Your Jab

The jab is a quick, straight punch that is thrown with the lead hand. It is one of the most basic punches in boxing, but it is also one of the most effective. The jab can be used to keep your opponent at bay, to set up other punches, or to score points. In a street fight, the jab can be especially effective at keeping your opponent from getting too close and overwhelming you.

2. Throw a Cross

The cross is a powerful punch that is thrown with the rear hand. It is typically used as a follow-up to the jab. The cross can be used to knock out your opponent or to cause serious damage. In a street fight, the cross can be a devastating punch if it lands clean.

3. Use Footwork

Footwork is essential for success in boxing. It allows you to move around the ring and to avoid your opponent's punches. In a street fight, footwork can be even more important. It can help you to create distance between yourself and your opponent, to set up your own punches, and to avoid being cornered.

4. Slip Punches

Slipping punches is a defensive technique that allows you to avoid your opponent's punches without having to block them. It is done by moving your head and body out of the way of the punch. Slipping punches can be difficult to master, but it is a very effective technique when it is done correctly.

5. Block Punches

Blocking punches is another defensive technique that can be used to protect yourself from your opponent's strikes. It is done by using your hands, arms, or body to deflect or absorb the impact of the punch. Blocking punches can be effective, but it is important to remember that it can also leave you open to counterattacks.

6. Clinch

Clinching is a technique that can be used to control your opponent and to prevent them from punching you. It is done by wrapping your arms around your opponent's body and holding them close. Clinching can be effective, but it is important to remember that it can also leave you open to other attacks, such as knees or elbows.

7. Use Dirty Tactics

In a street fight, there are no rules. This means that you are free to use whatever tactics you can to get the upper hand. This includes using dirty tactics, such as eye gouges, groin strikes, or biting. While these tactics may not be considered fair or sportsmanlike, they can be effective in a real-world altercation.

8. Be Aware of Your Surroundings

In a street fight, it is important to be aware of your surroundings. This includes
