The central circle, measuring 5 feet in diameter, serves as the game's starting point and is used for face-offs and penalty shots. The end lines, situated at each end of the court, mark the boundaries beyond which players may not venture. Sidelines, running parallel to the end lines, define the lateral limits of the playing area. Lastly, goal areas, positioned at each end of the court, are designated zones where goals can be scored.

Equipment Essentials: The Tools of the Trade

Circball is played with a specialized ball known as a circball. This uniquely designed ball, measuring 8 inches in диаметър, is constructed from a durable material to withstand the rigors of gameplay. The circball's smooth surface and balanced weight allow for precise passing and controlled shots.

Players are equipped with circball sticks, which serve as their primary tools for controlling and manipulating the ball. These sticks, typically crafted from lightweight aluminum or composite materials, feature a curved blade at one end for scooping and passing the circball. The other end of the stick is fitted with a rubber or foam grip for enhanced comfort and handling.

Gameplay Dynamics: A Symphony of Movement

Circball matches are played between two teams, each consisting of five players on the court. The game commences with a face-off at the централен кръг, where two opposing players vie for possession of the circball. Players may use their sticks to move the circball around the court, employing a variety of passing techniques and maneuvering strategies.

The primary objective in Circball is to score goals by propelling the circball into the opposing team's goal area. Goals can be scored by shooting the circball past the goalkeeper or by deflecting it off an opposing player into the goal. Teams earn points for each goal scored, with the team accumulating the most points by the end of the match emerging victorious.
