

The World My Oyster: Tale Of One Man's Dream To Sail Around The Globe

In the annals of sailing history, the story of Joshua Slocum stands alone. In 1895, Slocum set out from Boston in a 36-foot sloop named the Spray, and three years later, he became the first person to single-handedly sail around the world.

Slocum's journey was one of incredible hardship and adventure. He faced storms, pirates, and disease, but he never gave up on his dream. His story is an inspiration to anyone who has ever dared to dream big.
